Methods of Instruction

- Lecture/Discussion
- Distance Learning

Lecture:

1. Following lecture and activities on the topic of developing a growth mindset, instructor asks students to get in small groups and discuss struggles they've had since attending college and what they learned from them. Then the instructor assigns students to write a letter to a future RISE 801 student telling them about a struggle they have experienced in college, what they learned from it, and any advice they have for the student. The instructor then collects their letters, and saves them in order to give them back to them during stressful times of the semester, such as final exams, before big projects are due, etc. The letters are copied and saved (names removed) for students in future RISE 801 classes and the original will be added to student's e-portfolio.

Distance Learning

1. Instructor will provide lecture through video concerning a book/e-book related to a immigration/migration topic. Instructor will create videos with instructions on how to create a project based on the multicultural book to advocate for an underrepresented population. Students will research in the online library and create a presentation and/or video with information from the book and/or library and submit it online.

Typical Out of Class Assignments

Reading Assignments

A. One Book, One College: All sections of the course will be reading the same full-length text. A sample assignment based on the text is: Apply active reading strategies, including annotation, as you read chapter 1. Be ready to discuss in small groups next class. B. Read article on procrastination. Reflect on how procrastination affects money management and achieving goals.

Writing, Problem Solving or Performance

A. Use after-reading strategies, including summarizing, for chapter 3. Submit a 1-page paper to be included in your e-Portfolio reflecting on how the material relates to your life or experiences. B. Research at least 2 local or national scholarships using online sources and complete the personal statement or other writing requirement. Include these in your e-Portfolio and be prepared to share in groups next class.
